hoppers which are not yet bigger than flyes. There are yet a multitude that have eſcaped us, becauſe they are in the Corn, which is too forward to be gone into, without ſpoiling it. They have undone the People of our Parts, who had no Harveſt the laſt Year, and it will coſt above 3000 Livers to deſtroy them this Year. They have taken them in Abundance in the neighbouring Villages. If this care had not been taken, there would have been enough of them to have eaten up the Corn of the whole Province.

Whereas in the laſt Tranſaction an Hiſtorical Account was promiſed of the Trade Winds, the Patience of the Reader is entreated till the next; for by reaſon of the Abſence of a Perſon extraordinarily knowing in this Matter, whoſe Information was thought neceſſary, the ſaid Account could not as yet be perfected.

Erratum in Num. 181. Pag. 112. l. 6. r. a Northerly Wind, and in Scotland a Southerly.

Printed by J. Streater, and are to be ſold by Sam. Smith at the Sign of the Prince's Arms in St. Paul's Church yard.